Most of the landing field of the airfield 4 km south-east of Quedlinburg (M 52/D 35) was cultivated by the Deutsche Saatzuchtgesellschaft (German Seed Growing Company). Those kasernes on the western border of the field, which had been reconditioned were used as billets for a Soviet Zone German police school. The remaining section of the landing field, on which debris was scattered, was used as a drill ground by the Soviet Zone German police.

Comment:

No changes occurred at the field when compared with observations made in September 1949. There are no indications of intended reconditioning of the field.
